[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Racine, Wis., July 31.—Mrs. J. M. Denney and her two children were rescued from their burning home three miles north of this city shortly after two o'clock this morning by Conductor John Lindhard and Motorman John Dillings of the Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light Co., who were passing. The house was discovered to be on fire by the crew of the incoming car. Mrs. Denney with the children were asleep in an upper room and it was with great difficulty that they were awakened. When awakened they were dazed. The crew carried them out through the smoke and flames in their night clothes. During the conflagration Conductor Lindhard and Motorman Dillings were burned on the face and hands and their clothing was scorched. Mr. Denney was in Milwaukee on business.

To Sell Monona Grounds? Madison, Wis., July 31.—The Monona Lake assembly, the Madison Chautauque, has been a financial failure for the past two years, and stockholders are crying out for radical changes in management or that the fine grounds on the shore of Lake Monona be platted and placed upon the market for the finest lake shore of Monona and worth probably $100,000, so the stockholders are tired of digging into their pockets to make up deficits when they can divide this big sum by selling the property in lots.

C. H. Ballentine of Rockford was here on Monday looking for a place to manufacture a hand punch. He met several of our businessmen and they were favorably impressed with his tool and believe it will be a success. Plans are under way to further investigate the proposition and if Mr. Ballentine says is true, we believe that there is a good chance for the opening of a factory in Brodhead to manufacture the Chicago hand punch.

Some employees are not to be reached by the commission, but others are subject to restraint.

TIGHT MONEY HERE AFFECTING AFRICA

De Beers Diamond Mines, Which Have Shut Down Indefinitely, Feel Panic. [SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Kimberley, July 31.—The close of the De Beers diamond mine, which shut down today for an indefinite period, is attributed directly to the slump in the diamond trade in America. For more than a year the American imports have been steadily decreasing until they reached a figure that seriously threatened the diamond trade of the world. The De Beers Company, faced by the necessity of further retrenchment, decided to shut down the De Beers mine, which is the largest of the group of mines owned by the famous syndicate.

BIG LOSS CAUSED BY FIRE TODAY

JOHN A. DECKER AND RUFUS RESSEGUIE LOSE PROPERTY. DAMAGE WAS ABOUT $50,000. Flames Destroy House and Shed of J. A. Decker, and House, Barn and Shed of R. Resseguie.

Just before ten o'clock this morning the fire department answered a still alarm turned in from the corner of Milton and St. Mary's avenues. The blaze was at the home of John A. Decker, just beyond the limits of the city. A large tobacco warehouse containing 500 cases of tobacco and 60 tons of hay and practically all of the house was destroyed on the Decker place, a field of oats just south of the Decker home belonging to Walter Woodring was partially burned, and the strong northeast wind carried the fire to the home of Rufus L. Resseguie, burning his house, barn, tobacco shed and six stacks of hay.

The fire originated at the Decker place, where several children were playing in the yard in the rear of the house and had built a small bonfire. The wind carried the sparks to some straw lying nearby and the flames quickly reached the house. After futile attempts to beat out the fire with a blanket the fire department was notified, and a few minutes later the box was pulled.

Steamer Out. As there was only one hydrant near the scene of the blaze the steamer was brought up and set to work. One lead of hose was run from the hydrant and the others from the steamer. Most of the household furniture was removed from the Decker house, but some of it was destroyed. A valuable diamond pin was lying on a bureau at the time the fire broke out and could not be found later.

The rear of the house was practically destroyed and the loss will be about $15,000, partially covered by insurance. Just in the rear of the house stood a large Lehigh tobacco shed containing 500 cases of tobacco. One hundred cases of this was the property of Mr. Decker and the remainder was the property of the American Society of Equity and had been stored there by Mr. Decker. All the tobacco was insured. The shed was totally destroyed and sixty tons of hay were also burned. The entire loss, irrespective of insurance, will be about $50,000. Wind Carried Sparks. Shortly after the department reached the Decker place fire was discovered at the Resseguie house, about a half-mile southwest of the Decker home, on St. Mary's avenue. The wind carried a blazing shingle across the fields and dropped it on the barn. A general alarm calling out all the fire department was turned in and part of the men went to the Resseguie place. The fire was fanned by a strong northeast wind and in a few minutes the barn was blazing. Six stacks of hay in the rear barn soon caught fire and also a tobacco shed. The efforts of the firemen were then turned to saving the house, but hampered by the lack of water, as they had only one lead of hose, they were unable to prevent the house catching fire. The rear and south side of the house were burned, but the greater part of the household furniture was saved. A barn thirty by forty feet with some farm machinery in it and a tobacco shed 50x60 feet, which was empty, were burned. All the buildings were partially injured. The loss on the Resseguie

CHANGES EFFECTIVE IN FLEET COMMAND

Rear Admiral of Pacific Fleet Relieved Today—Admiral Swinburne Successor. [SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Washington, D. C., Rear Admiral James H. Dayton, commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet, is to be relieved from the duty today and will proceed to his home to await his statutory retirement for age in October. Rear Admiral Dayton is succeeded in command of the Pacific fleet by Rear Admiral William T. Swinburne, who has been in command of the second squadron of the fleet.

Admiral Dayton, whose active career in the navy is brought to a close, has had about twenty-four years' service at sea. He is from Indiana, and entered the navy in September, 1862. He reached the grade of rear admiral in February, 1906, when he was appointed to the command of the Pacific fleet and took the armored cruiser division of the fleet from New York to the Philippines and then to the California coast.

Admiral Swinburne, the new commander of the Pacific fleet, is sixty-one years old and a native of Rhode Island. He graduated from the Annapolis academy in 1866 and since that time has seen service in all parts of the world. He had a prominent part in the naval operations in West Indian waters during the war with Spain and later joined Admiral Dewey's fleet at Manila. From 1902 to 1904 he was the commander of the battleship Texas.

HOT CAMPAIGN IN KANSAS NOW DRAWING TO A CLOSE

Two Candidates Are After Place Of Governor Hoch--Fight For Seat In Congress.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Topeka, Kan., July 31.—One of the most interesting Republican campaigns that Kansas has known in many years is practically ended, and from end to end the State is awaiting with the keenest interest the results of the general primary next Tuesday. In its outcome is involved the governorship and the question of who shall be the Republican senator in the United States congress from this state to succeed Chester L. Long. There is also involved the nomination of candidates for minor state offices, for electors, for congress for legislative county and township places. Senator Long is opposed in his contest for reelection by Joseph L. Bristow, who was formerly Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General. For a number of weeks the rival aspirants have been engaged in a lively campaign that has carried them to every nook and corner of the state. The managers of the Long campaign appear to feel every confidence in the result. Nevertheless they have taken no chance of becoming victims of overconfidence and they are keeping up the fight with unabated vigor to the very end. The Long forces have had the benefit of a splendid political organization that extends its ramifications through every county of Kansas. They expect to win out by a good safe margin that will leave no doubt as to the result. The Bristow forces, on the other hand, are likewise claiming the victory, though their claims are not so expansive as the Long claims. Bristow has made a good fight for the toga and his friends expect him to show up well in the primary, even though he may not win out. His attacks on Senator Long undoubtedly have given that statesman some anxious moments. President Roosevelt is exceedingly popular with the Republicans of Kansas and Mr. Bristow has made one of his strongest points against his opponent by charging the Senator with insincerity in his support of the President and his policies. He also charges Senator Long with being in too close sympathy with the railroads and other large corporations.

Cyrus Leland, the opponent for Stubbs, was formerly the national republican committeeman from Kansas and a personal friend and adviser of President McKinley. He has lived in Kansas more than fifty years and has contributed more to the state's political history than any other citizen. He is a practical politician and his organization reaches every voting precinct in the state. His name is as famous to Kansans as is that of Joseph Cannon of Illinois, or William B. Allison of Iowa. He is a typical representative of "practical" politics. Between Stubbs, the representative of the La Follette school of politics, and Leland, the "practical" politician, the issue is clean cut. Stubbs expects to win through an uprising and a whirlwind, which his political opponents believe will not materialize in next Tuesday's primary. Leland must win through his superior organization, which admittedly never was in better shape to bring about success at the polls.

FOLA LA FOLLETTE SUES THE BLOCK AMUSEMENT CO.

Was Engaged To Play A Role In Production That Was Never Staged, And Asks For $1,500 Damages. [SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Chicago, Ill., July 31.—A motion to set aside the order of adjudication in bankruptcy of the Block Amusement Company has been filed in the United States district court by Miss Fola La Follette, daughter of United States Senator La Follette of Wisconsin. That she was engaged to play a role in a production that was never staged and as a result of which she failed to receive her weekly stipend of $250, is alleged by her. She wants $1,500 damages. It is alleged that the amusement company not only failed to produce the play but forgot to release Miss La Follette from her contract and that the season passed before she was able to obtain other employment.

ENGINEER BLAMED FOR HOGAN'S DEATH

Findings of Coroner's Jury at Millux, Cal., Shows Faulty of Rotor That He Was Asleep Under Train.

According to a Millux, Cal., paper which has come to the Gazette's editorial desk, the verdict of the jury held for the purpose of fixing the blame for the sudden death of W. J. Hogan, a former Janesville boy working as a brakeman there, was that the engineer of the gravel train on which Hogan was working was careless. According to the testimony given by the crew of a train which was passing the gravel train, the engineer did not give the whistle signal before starting and did not immediately stop after he had received the signal to do so. From the evidence which was gathered it appears that Hogan had probably been going over the train and discovering something which had needed to be fixed had stopped to repair it. It is supposed that he was trying to repair a broken brake-beam on one of the cars in the train on which he was working, expecting that if the train started the engineer would give the signal and he could get out of the way. On starting, the train threw him to the ground and he was dragged about a car's length before the train was stopped, tearing his clothing from his back and inflicting the injuries which resulted in his death. As soon as the accident was discovered some of the passengers on a train which was passing, alighted and picked up

DOC WILLIAMS WAS HANGED FOR MURDER

Texas Murderer Who Made Sensational Escape Paid Penalty Today. [SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] San Antonio, Texas, July 31.—The execution of "Doc" Williams, who made a sensational escape from the Texas state jail two weeks ago, took place today within the confines of that institution. The crime of which Williams was convicted was the murder of Thomas J. Turner, a man who had befriended him. The murder occurred on the Laverna road last April and the murderer made an unsuccessful attempt to hide his crime by burning the body of his victim. His trial took place here in May and resulted in a speedy conviction. Wetmore to Play Maroons: The Wetmore baseball team which defeated the Sugar Factory team last Sunday, will play the Beloit Maroons in Beloit next Sunday, according to press-out arrangements.

THE CHAUTAUQUA PROVED FAILURE

FINAL DECISION WAS REACHED
LAST NIGHT AFTER CONFERENCE.

HAS BEEN DISAPPOINTMENT

Business Conditions and Manager Holbrook's Non-appearance Are Blamed.

At a meeting held last evening it was definitely decided not to attempt to continue the Chautauqua program any longer. Father Vaughan, Father Goshko, John Jones and a number of people who were to appear upon the program held a conference at which they attempted to find some way of carrying out the program until Sunday night. The talent were disappointed with the results so far and refused to appear unless guaranteed their full pay according to the contracts signed by them with the Holbrook Amusement company. The local men interested in the plan offered to pay them their per cent of the receipts if they would remain and appear, but they absolutely refused to do so. Manager Holbrook's representative, George Cook of Chicago, was present, but was unable to make any definite promises. It was felt by those in charge here that inasmuch as some of those who demanded their pay immediately had not yet appeared that they could not pay them now. As a final result it was decided not to attempt to carry on the Chautauqua any longer.

Poor Season

This season has been very poor for Chautauques all over the country and as a result the talent were unwilling to make any concessions. The advent of circus day in the midst of the week meant two days of poor attendance and one day when practically no one would attend, which was a handicap that could hardly be overcome. Manager Holbrook left the first of the week saying he was going to Fox Lake for a few days' rest. Since then he has not been located. As he or rather his company had made all the contracts with the talent and those in charge locally had nothing to do with paying the talent it was very difficult to attempt to reach any arrangement without his being present. He was expected to arrive in Janesville this morning.

A Modern Convenience.
A British lord of the admiralty, whose knowledge of nautical details was limited, was recently taking his first trip in a rather leaky vessel, when he observed the men working the pumps. "Dear me!" he said, "I did not know you had a well on board, captain; but I'm really glad you have, for I detest sea water."—Harper's Weekly.

Not Like a Man.
"The female codfish," remarked the boarder who had been glancing statistics from between the covers of a patient medicine almanac, "lays more than a million eggs. Now, what do you think of that?" "I think," rejoined the Cheerful Idiot, "that it's a mighty lucky thing for the codfish that she doesn't have to cackle over every egg."

Proofs of Olympia's Great Age.
Excavation carried out in the sacred precincts of Olympia, Greece, near the great altar of Zeus, have resulted in the discovery of interesting remains of the neolithic period, including human vessels and implements. Thus it is believed to be evident that Olympia was a place of human habitation more than 3,000 years before Christ.

Content to Do Little.
Let us be content to do little, if God sets us at little tasks. It is but pride and self-will which says: "Give me something huge to fight, and I should enjoy that; but why make me sweep the dust?"—Charles Kingsley.

Both the presidential and vice presidential nominees of the Prohibition party have long been political factors and strong advocates of prohibition. Eugene W. Chafin of Chicago was one of the two men on the Illinois primary ticket for governor. His nomination for the presidency of the United States leaves the nomination for governor to Daniel R. Sheen. Mr. Chafin lives at Edison Park. He is a practicing attorney and has been the Prohibition nominee for judge of the superior court. His running mate, the Rev. Aaron S. Watkins of the Ohio Northern university at Ada, Ohio, ran for governor on the Prohibition ticket three years ago.

FRESH AIR FIRST REQUISITE.

Without it, Perfect Condition of Health is Impossible.

If people only knew what good health and good spirits attend sleeping with one's head under a window tent, one and all would do it, says a bulletin of the Indiana health department. Coughs, colds, pneumonia, consumption and all other diseases of the air passages are principally induced by breathing foul air. The window tent supplies fresh outdoor air to breathe, and at the same time permits the body to be in a warm room. The head is accustomed to the cold, and in very cold weather an ordinary woman's knit hood may be worn to protect the ears and cheeks. During the night and when asleep the tissues are repaired and the brain and nerve cells are recharged with energy. Pure air is the great factor in repair work. Consumption and catarrh in their early stages can be cured by breathing fresh air night and day.

A Fast Record.

At a political convention held in Illinois the importance of nominating a popular man for a certain close district, was thoroughly recognized. A speaker had just recommended a personal friend for the position, and in an elaborate eulogy had presented in glowing terms his manifold merits, especially emphasizing his great services on the field of battle as well as in the pursuits of peace.

After he had finished a voice was heard in the rear of the room. "What we want is the man that will run the boat."

In an instant the orator was again on his feet.

"If you think," he yelled, "that this convention can find anybody that can run better than the gentleman I have nominated, I point once more to his well-known war record."—Lippincott's.

Cheering a Disease.

An Atchison woman who attended medical college tells this story: In lecturing, the professor would usually wind up his remarks by saying, "This disease is peculiar to women." Finally, he told about Bright's disease. "This disease," he said, "is peculiar to men." Whereupon a woman student in the back of the lecture hall arose and said: "There are seven women present. I propose that we seven give three cheers that there is one disease not peculiar to women."—Atchison Globe.

A Wireless Electrocuting.

A man came to me with a rifle which, he declared, could speed a ball "more or less" than anything ever heard of in the gun category. He was asked to produce the evidence. It was a small affair, about as big as a Salsbold 500-shot airgun. "Fire at that live wire," I demanded. "It's dangerous, but I'll chance it," he replied, taking quick aim and pulling the trigger. The bullet struck the wire, and when I looked at the man he was dead. The electric current had passed through the hole in the air made by the bullet, reached the muscle of the gun, and given the death stroke. It was as a lightning bolt from a clear sky.—N. Y. Press.

Power of Sacred Song.

The power of song to sway the feelings of man was illustrated the other night, amid the garish surroundings of a Summit street barroom. About 11 o'clock about a dozen of Uncle Sam's tars from the Wolverine entered the bar. Fully a hundred men were seated at the tables drinking. One of the sailors stepped over to the piano. A whispered word to the pianist, and the prelude to the "Holy City" was played. As the sailor began singing a man near the center of the room rose to his feet and bared his head, and in an instant every man in the room had followed.—Toledo Blade.

RESHAPES DEFORMED NOSES

Upturned, One-sided or Flat Noses Easily Brought Into Shape.

The nose of a great many persons are slightly deformed, and because of the prominence of this feature the appearance of the face is more or less disfigured. Such deformity can frequently be remedied by a gentle but continuous pressure. With the aid of a specially designed "nose-shaper," recently patented by a Massachusetts man, this result can be brought about in a way that will be palatable to the individual. Upturned, upturned or flat noses, or those with the hooked nostrils, can be easily straightened into normal form. This contrivance is made of thin sheet metal with is gently resilient to conform to the shape of the nose. The portion coming in contact with the nose has a lining of chamomile skin which protects the skin of the patient. This nose-shaper is held in place on the nose by bands or tapes, fastening with a buckle. In positioning the device the bands are brought down behind the neck and crossed and then carried up and buckled over the forehead. The result is that a slight but steady tension is applied to the nose, the latter being thus gradually and steadily brought into normal shape. Naturally, such a device should be worn at night. Its continuous use reforming and reshaping the nose to its normal lines.

SCISSORS SHARPENER

Simple Device Does the Work Without Skilled Labor.

Sharpening a pair of scissors has always been considered a properly belonging to an expert. An Indiana inventor decided that a device could be readily made by which the sharpening could be readily accomplished by anyone. He accordingly designed the device shown here, by which scissors can be sharpened without entailing the employment of skilled labor. It comprises a base, which is clamped to a table or other support. On the base is a sharpening stone or other suitable ultrarive material, while at the opposite end is an upright arm from which depends a movable clamp. The scissors are held in correct position over the stone by means of the clamp. The latter is then moved back and forth along the arm, thus moving the blades of the scissors across the sharpening stone. Where scissors are employed to a great extent this simple means of sharpening the dull blades should prove both valuable and economical. ### INGENIOUS CORKPULLER

Simple Implement for Removing the Most Obnoxious of Corks.

Everyone will undoubtedly welcome the successful effort of a Philadelphia inventor to improve the old-fashioned corkscrew which has been in use for ages and still retains its original form. Attempts to pull a cork with the ordinary corkscrew in many cases ends disastrously to the person making the attempt, especially when the cork fits tightly in the neck of the bottle and refuses to be removed.

until the bottle has been placed between the knee and the corkscrew lodged at for several minutes. Then it invariably comes out with a sudden jerk, throwing the contents in all directions. Notice how simply and easily even the most tightly wedged cork can be withdrawn with the corker shown in the accompanying illustration. After the corker is properly inserted in the cork, the upright arm forming a wedge is placed on the neck of the bottle. Using the handle as a lever, the most obstinate cork can be easily extracted without endangering the clothes of the operator. When not in use, the corker and wedge can be folded within the outer end of the handle, which is hollowed out to form a housing.

SHOE PROTECTOR

Prevents Injury to Shoes of Miners and Others Using Shovels.

It is well known that the ordinary shoe is not of sufficient strength to warrant use by miners, laborers on railways and other places where shovels and spades are employed. An Arkansas man, therefore, designed the shoe protector shown here for the purpose of protecting the shoe, especially at the shank and instep. As shown in the accompanying illustration, the protector consists of a metal plate, which fits beneath the shank of the shoe. A piece of leather or other flexible material extends from the metal plate around the heel, with the other end over the instep, both connecting by buckles and straps to a piece of leather extending from the opposite side of the metal plate. It will be obvious that a shoe provided with this protection braces the shank and instep of the foot of the wearer. Moreover, a shovel can be readily pushed into the ground without injury to the shoe. The protector is quickly attached to or detached from the shoe.

The Store That Makes Good

A BAD SIGN

Bradstreet's annual report is regarded as the highest authority on business matters. It finds that 84 per cent of the merchants that failed during the year 1903 did not advertise and hints that probably the other 16 per cent did not advertise enough.

This day of hustle and bustle the merchants who neglect to use newspaper space to push his business is considered a back number. Live up-to-date people realize this and avoid them. The business men who greet his patrons through the papers every day is the one that does the business.

A look up and down the street will convince the doubtful of the truth of the above statement.

STREET TREES' VALUE

Index of the Character of Any Community.

HINTS ON PLANTING THEM.

Give Each Tree Enough Room So That When Fully Grown Its Individual Beauty Will Not Be Lost. Care of Young Stock.

Street trees and their condition are largely an index, for they have much to do with the character and growth of a city or town. While they add much to the comfort and pleasure of the inhabitants, the evident determination to be comfortable bespeaks the character of the people. Not only do street trees concern the present, but narrow one of still better results in the future. If one but takes the trouble to look the matter up it will be found that a majority of the larger cities east of the Mississippi started as well planted, well cared for villages. Often this marvelous growth may be traced back to where some enthusiastic individual or small band of workers determined that their village should be made beautiful and attractive to home seekers.

Many can, if they would, start this work with a swing and gait that could not fail to succeed, thereby adding to the property values of both self and neighbors. "Why stand you idly by?" Do not overplant streets. Allow each tree sufficient room so that when fully grown its individual beauty will not be lost. Trees so planted always make the more satisfactory growth. Their root systems start forth equally distributed in all directions. If planted too close to each other ribs of large size the space between trees is soon exhausted of plant food and completely filled with roots; then the feeders make a frantic rush at right angles to the row, seeking plant food wherever most easily obtained. In country districts this often results in those starving trees sending their roots into orchards comparatively near the surface, and thereby destroying the nearest row of fruit trees.

A most thorough preparation of a deep soil bed for the young trees will start a rooting system down deep in the natural reservoir of plant food, and the feeders will not then push up near the surface to forage because of short rations at home. Roots reaching into and interfering with orchard or garden may in the case of old trees be cut by digging a trench parallel with the row and cutting them off. If the tops are also properly pruned, the tree will not need such an extensive root system to support it. If the street tree is given an occasional food and cultivation, as is always the case with orchard trees, it might be induced to board at home for all time. The need of ample room, if we are to secure the best tree development, is strikingly shown in the case of the common blue gum, a forest tree. When grown in commercial plantations or shelter belts it sends up a tall, straight shaft with scarcely a branch of any note. When standing alone it develops a handsome, umbrageous form and often makes an ideal shade tree.

One of the most serious drawbacks to street tree planting is the inability to obtain capable men to do the work. In spite of the fact that men on every hand may be found who claim to be trained gardeners, very few are at all competent to plant trees or care for them after planting. Even the best gardeners are seldom trained in those lines which have to deal with street trees, and a well trained orchardist is to be preferred for the planting, while special training is required for intelligent pruning. If more good men were available, our larger cities and towns might be encouraged to appoint tree wardens or city foresters. As it is, the authorities feel somewhat helpless, and the matter drifts along, the property owner planting and the wind or who whinger pruning until no respectable trees are left. Some day the city or town awakes to find it has no street trees worthy the name, and a movement is made to begin all over again, reclaiming such trees as are still of value, rooting out and replacing old marred stumps, and only by a general upheaval is it possible to place the municipality on the road toward the city beautiful goal.

Young street trees growing vigorously need attention in a variety of ways. Abnormal and useless growths must be cut off, and so must the top at a proper height, the latter to induce branching into a low heading tree rather than continuing upward into a spindly and inefficient exclamation point on the landscape view. All young trees, as a rule, need staking and tying, and no halfway measures should be adopted in this work. Have the stakes strong enough to resist the heaviest windstorm and the cord equally effective. The latter should be large and soft that it may not cut into the tender bark as well as making a closely knit knot that will not come untied or slip. Frequent and copious irrigations must be given during the first summer following planting, more especially if unusually large holes have not been dug, so as to induce a free, far-reaching root system. It is well to remember the old adage, "As the twig is bent the tree's inclined." A few minutes' pruning when young will remove the necessity of unsightly "hacking" in the future.

Keep the Lawn Clipped.

Nothing adds a touch of refinement to the home place so well as a neatly clipped lawn. Of course it takes work, but what doesn't that brings any satisfaction?

Be Yourself.

Be yourself—simple, honest and unpretending—and you will enjoy through life the respect and love of friends.

BITS OF HUMOR

HAD THE FIGURES.

He—Then what did you marry me for?
She—Mamma reckoned it up at the time and said it was for a million and a half.

WISH HE COULD.

Book Agent—Is your pa in?
Boy—Yes, sir.
Book Agent—Can I see him?
Boy—No. He's in for thirty days.

SURE METHOD.

Author—I tell you, I'm going to rise in this world!
Editor—Balloons or dynamite?

LUCHEARSAL TRIALS.

Stage V.P.—Hill! Hill!
Call Boy—I expected you would be.

THE MEAN THING.

Kitty—My dressmaker says it is such a pleasure to fit a gown to me.
Belle—Consider it a sort of artistic triumph, I suppose? The true artist delights in difficulties.

SORRY HE SPOKE.

Barber—Razor all right, sir?
Customer—My dear man, if you hadn't mentioned it, I'd never have known there was a razor on my face.
Barber—Thank you!
Customer—I thought you were using a file!

TOO TRUE.

Admiring Mamma—I don't think you have quite caught the expression of Evelyn's nose.
Artist—Madam, Raphael couldn't do better than that.
Admiring Mamma—Why not?
Artist—Because, madam, Raphael is dead.

AS THEY SAY.

Ella—Ella told me that you told her that secret that I told you not to tell her.
Stella—She's a mean thing—I told her not to tell you I told her.
Ella—Well, I told her I wouldn't tell you she told me—so don't tell her I did.

PSYCHOLOGY OF THE OYSTER.

James Russell Lowell Was Prepared to Add a Few "Facts."

One of the most profound remarks ever made by that profound philosopher, Thackeray, was when he passed two tubs of oysters side by side and he saw one was labeled "Is a dozen" and the other "Is 3d a dozen." He exclaimed: "How those oysters must hate each other."

Well, "even an oyster may be crossed in love," and William Dean Howells has another tale to tell about the psychology of the oyster. At one of the little suppers that the poet Longfellow gave to the brilliant Cambridge critic James Russell Lowell paused with the pepper box poised above his plate of oysters to say whimsically: "It's astonishing how these fellows love pepper."

"Dear me! You don't say so!" ejaculated a nice, prosy old gentleman who used to sleep through the suppers. The temptation was too strong to be resisted, and Lowell was fairly launched into an account of how a red pepper, accidentally dropped into a basket of oysters, had been drawn out with half a dozen of the bivalves clinging to it, when the over gentle Longfellow interposed to save his matter-of-fact old friend.—Woman's Home Companion.

The Sense of Duty.

A sense of duty pursues us ever. It is omnipresent like the Deity. If we take to ourselves the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, duty performed or duty violated is still with us, for our happiness or our misery. If we say the darkness shall cover us, in the darkness as in the light our obligations are with us yet.—Daniel Webster.

Best Work at Fifty.

In the industrial world it has become accepted that a man is too old at 40, and the London county council works department decided last year not to engage men above 55. How is it in the intellectual world? Despite all the evidences of precocity, Mr. Dorland arrives at a conclusion which gives an average of 50 for the master work of great men.—T. P.'s Weekly.

Nightingales Under a Ban.

It is said that no nightingales sing in Havering, England. Legend has it that the singing of the birds disturbed the devotion of Edward the Confessor when at his Havering palace, and he therefore placed them under a ban from which they have never recovered.

By JOHN BARRETT, Director of the International Bureau of American Republics.

The Bureau of the American Republics, the Pan-American bureau, as it is at times called, is a unique institution in the history of the world's international relations. It was founded 18 years ago, in Washington, during the session of the first Pan-American conference, which was presided over by James G. Blaine. There was nothing premeditated about its origin. The purpose of the early founders was simply to provide some place where there could be collected information as to the production and commerce, the customs, laws and regulations of the countries forming the conference. This bureau, then called the Commercial Bureau of the American Republics, was the official organ of an association entitled "The International Union of American Republics," composed of the independent nations of the western hemisphere. The number has now become 21.

The Sympathy of Friendship.
It is sublime to feel and say of another, I need never meet, or speak, or write to him; we need not re-enforce ourselves or send tokens of remembrance; I rely on him as on myself; if he did thus or this, I knew it was right.—Emerson.

Advice.
"Never marry a man to reform him, my dear," counseled Aunt Hepzibah. "If you do reform him he'll hate you for it, and if you don't you'll always be plying yourself for having married a man who wasn't good enough for you."

Confusion of Poisons.
The Russians may make a mistake in putting a skull-and-cross-bones label on bottles of vodka. They will teach the simple peasant, who cannot read, to look for the poison label when he is thirsty, and who can tell how much carbolic acid, vitriol and such deadly drugs will be taken in the guise of the other poison.

Simply Impossible.
Big with the importance of a new discovery, a London preacher says: "Never check the flowing tide of woman's talk." We never heard of anybody who ever did.—Chicago Post.

INDIAN ORE PICKERS IN BOLIVIA.

MISS ELEANOR BONHAM AND HER HOME IN YORK, PA.

York, Pa.—A romance involving Caleb Powers of Kentucky and Miss Bonham of York, Pa., it is thought will result in the happy union of the couple. Upon his release from prison after his pardon, which virtually admitted his innocence of any complicity in the Goebel assassination, Caleb Powers immediately journeyed to York, Pa., to call upon this young lady, who had been his "friend in need."

The romance began as a schoolgirl's sympathy for Kentucky's political prisoner. Miss Bonham was in Cincinnati attending the College of Music and became interested in Powers through a position which was circulated in the school and which she signed. After a careful study of the defendant's case she became thoroughly convinced he was innocent of any crime, and her schoolgirl sympathy developed into a mature determination to do everything in her power to assist Mr. Powers. During the trial she frequently journeyed to Georgetown to attend the court, and although unknown to Caleb Powers, she was very influential in financing his second trial. Miss Bonham soon won her mother and sisters to her view and together they were of great assistance. Then came the third trial and the culmination of the romance. Miss Bonham left home ostensibly to return to school in Cincinnati. Instead she went to the trial in Kentucky. This time she met Powers in court and they became warm friends. When the trial ended in a conviction Miss Bonham returned home. Immediately correspondence opened up between the prisoner and his sympathizer and upon his release Powers set out to find his friend and helper. Friends of Miss Bonham in York, Pa., expect the announcement of her engagement, although so far there has been no statement relative to this from the family.

Jane Cable

...By...
GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON,
Author of "Beverly of Graustark," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1908, BY DODD, MEAD & COMPANY

"Her father was standing in the middle of the sidewalk, looking down the darkening street. His eyes were turned to the corner below, showing that he had been standing there for longer than a minute. She watched him with interest. What had happened in the street to hold his interest so closely? It was Jane who opened the door and let him in. As she closed the door, she noticed the frown on his brow and caught the strange gleam in his eyes. His greeting was less warm than usual, and he went to his room upstairs without removing his hat or coat below. But not before he sent a quick, keen glance about the drawing room to find if James Hainsamer had been the single visitor of the afternoon.

"Where is your mother?" he asked from the stairs, without looking back. "She has just gone to her room," Jane replied, a chill shooting through her veins. Some strange, unnatural impulse compelled her to add, as if the explanation were just and necessary, "We have had a lot of people in drinking tea, and mother has a headache."

She watched him ascend the steps and turn into his smoking room. The door closed sharply, and a wave of inexplicable relief rushed over her. Her hands were cold. She went to the fireplace and held them out to the blaze. Her ears were alert for sounds from above—alert with a strange fear which choked her with its persistence. She dreaded the opening of her father's door and his footsteps as they crossed to her mother's room. She waited for those sounds, minute after minute, but they did not come. The fire would not give warmth to her hands; the chill seemed to spread. In her new consciousness she felt that a tragedy was just begun.

CHAPTER XIV.

ABLE saw Hainsamer leave the house as he drove up to the curb in front. The lawyer did not look back, but turned the nearest corner as if eager to disappear from sight as quickly as possible.

Closing the door of his smoking room behind him, David Cable dropped wearily into a chair without removing his hat or coat. His blood was running cold through his veins, his jaw was set and his eyes had the appearance of one who has been seized by a blow. For many minutes he sat and stared at the shadows in the ember lit grate. From time to time he swallowed painfully and his jaw twitched. Things began growing black and green before his eyes. He started up, with an oath.

He was consumed by the fires of jealousy and suspicion. The doubt that had found lodging in his mind so recently now became a cruel certainty. Into his grim hand sprang the rage of the man who finds himself deceived, despised, dishonored. He was seething with his own eyes, no doubt, just what others had seen for months—had seen and had pitied or scorned him as the unfortunate dupe. With the thought of it he actually ground his teeth; tears of rage and mortification sprang to his eyes. He recalled his own feelings in instances where shame had fallen upon other men; he recalled his own easy indifference and the temptation to laugh at the plight of the poor devils. It had never entered his mind that some day he might be the object of like consideration in others more or less fortunate, according to their friends.

By the time dinner was announced he had succeeded in restoring himself to a state of comparative calmness. He did not dress for dinner, as was his custom, nor did he stop to ask Frances Cable if she were ready to go down. He heard Jane playing the piano as he descended. She nodded to him, but did not stop, and he paused near the fireplace to look at her strangely. Somewhere back in his brain there was struggling, unknown to him, the old time thought that this child bore him no likeness whatsoever. He only knew he was crumbling down the fear that evil or slander or pain might come to her if he were rash, yet just. He was wondering if he could face his wife without betraying himself.

"Jane played softly, listlessly. She, on the other hand, was wondering what Graydon would think or say if she spoke to him of what she had seen. She wondered if he would blame her mother as she was beginning to blame his father.

"Mother won't be down to dinner," she finally said.

"Is she ill?" he asked after a moment.

"She is lying down, Margaret will take some tea up to her."

Father and daughter had but little to say to each other during the meal. Their efforts at conversation were perfunctory, commonplace, an unusual state of affairs, of which neither took notice.

"You look tired, father. Has it been a hard day?"

"A rather trying one, Jane. We're having some trouble with the blizzards out west. Tying up everything that we are rushing to the Philippines."

"Is it settled that you are to be made president?"

"It looks like it." There followed a long silence. "By the way, I have good news for you. Mr. Clegg told me today that they are going to take Graydon into the firm. Isn't it great? Really, it is quite remarkable. You are not the only person, it seems, who thinks a lot of that boy."

"A partner? Really? Oh, isn't it glorious? I know he could—I told him he'd be a partner before long." She waited a moment and then added, "His father was here today for a cup of tea." Cable caught the slightly altered tone and looked up. She was smiling with her fork, palpably preoccupied.

"I'm—I'm sorry I missed him," said he, watching her closely.

"You like him very much, don't you, father?"

"Certainly, and I'm sure your mother does." The fork shook in her fingers and then dropped upon the plate. She looked up in confusion. Cable's eyes were bent upon her intently, and she had never seen so queer a light in them. Scarcely more than the fraction of a second passed before he lowered his gaze, but the mysterious telegraph of the mind had shot the message of comprehension from one to the other. He saw with horror that the girl at least suspected the true situation. A moment later he arose abruptly and announced that he would run up to see her mother before settling down to some important work in his den.

"Graydon is coming over tonight," she said. "We'll be very quiet and try not to disturb you. Don't work too hard, daddy dear."

Upstairs Frances Cable was battling with herself in supreme despair. Confession was on her lips a dozen times, but courage failed her. When she heard his footsteps in the hallway she was ready to cry out the truth to him and end the suspense. As he opened the door to enter the spirit of fairness turned frail and fled before the appeal of procrastination. "Wait, wait, wait!" cried the powerful weakness in her heart, and it conquered. She could not tell him then. "Tomorrow—the next day, yes, but not then. It was too much to demand of herself, after all."

He came in, but left a few minutes later. She was strangely unresponsive to his tender inquiries. Her thoughts were of another man, his quick conclusion as he fled from her presence before the harsh accusations could break from his eyes.

In his den once more, with the door closed, he gave himself up completely to black thoughts. He recalled his words to her, uttered years ago, half in jest and half in earnest. He had horrified her beyond expression by telling her how he would punish a wife, if he were the husband who deceived. With a grin, he would remember the punishment. He had said he would not kill; he would disfigure the woman frightfully and permit her to live as a moral example to other wives. He now felt less brutal. He might kill, but he would not disfigure. For an hour he sat and wondered what had been the feelings of his old friend George Driscoll just before he deliberately slew his faithless wife. He remembered saying to other friends at the time that Driscoll had "done right."

This night of black shadows—he could not sleep at all—was really the beginning of the end. He forgot the prudency that was to be handed out to him. He forgot everything but the horrible cancer that gnawed into his heart and brain.

Day and night he writhed in silent agony, a prey to the savage jealousy that grew and grew until it absorbed all other emotions. Scandal, divorce, dishonor, murder, swept before the mind of this man who had been of the people and who could not condone. The people kill.

For a week he waited and watched and suffered. What he knew of men told him that they do not deceive themselves to the wives of others with honorable motives behind them. He convinced himself that he knew the world; he had seen so much of it. The man aged years in that single week of jealousy and suspense. His face went haggard; his eyes took on a strange gleam; his manner was that of a man in grave trouble.

Day after day this piteous, frenzied man who swayed thousands with his hand stooped to deal with the smallest movements of one man and one woman. Despite his most intense desire to drive himself into other and higher channels, he found himself skulking and spying and conniving with but one low end in view.

He employed every acute sense in the effort to justify his suspicions. Time and again he went home at unusual hours, fearing all the while that he might incur the pain of finding Hainsamer there. He even visited the man in his office, always rejoicing in the fact that he found him there at the time. He watched the mail in the morning; he planned to go out of nights and then hurried home deliberately, but unexpectedly. Through it all he said no word to Frances Cable or Jane. He asked no questions, but he was being beaten down by apprehensions all the while.

His wife's manner convinced him that all was not well with her. She avoided being alone with him, keeping close to her room. He detected a hundred pretexts by which she managed to escape his simplest advances.

At last, overwhelmed by the strain, he began to resort to cunning—the man who was big enough to have gone from the engine cab to the president's office. It required hours of struggle with his fuller, nobler nature to bring himself low enough to do trickery, but the vital influence mattered. He despised himself for the trick, but he would know the truth.

The late afternoon mail one day brought to Mrs. Cable a brief letter, typewritten both inside and out. David Cable saw her open and read the missive, and he saw her trembling hand go to her throat and then to her temple. Her back was toward him. He could not see her face until she turned, a full minute later. Then it was calm and undisturbed, but her eyes were brilliant. He ground his teeth and tore upstairs without a word. David Cable had stooped low enough to write this letter, and he was paying for it.

He knew the contents far better than she knew them. The letter purported to be an urgent appeal from James Hainsamer, asking her to meet him at 8 o'clock that night. It said: "I must see you tonight. Leave your house at 8 o'clock for a short call on Mrs. W., just around the corner. I will meet you across the Drive, near the sea wall. It is quite dark there."

David Cable did not know that earlier in the afternoon James Hainsamer had called her up by phone to say that he intended to speak to his son the following day unless word came to him from her, nor could he have possibly known that she was now determined to tell the whole story to her husband and to trust to his mercy. He only knew that he had written the letter and that he had told her of his intention to go downtown immediately after dinner.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Forty years ago, . . . . .
 Janesville Daily Gazette, July 30, 1868—First New Grain—The first new grain which we have heard of being brought into this market, was purchased by Mr. William Casar yesterday. It consisted of a carload of oats which Mr. C. reports to be as bright and plump as any he ever saw.

An Attraction—A baby carriage containing two girls about a year old, attracted a great deal of attention on Main street yesterday. The carriage was surrounded several times by crowds who were interested in the beauty of the little ones. We understand they are the children of a Mrs. Austin of Whitewater.

A Narrow Escape—At Clear Lake, yesterday, toward evening, as a party of ladies and gentlemen were preparing to leave for home, the team of Mr. Payne started to run just as they were unhitched, and before he had got into the carriage and before any one of the three ladies in the vehicle had taken the reins. In attempting to stop them Mr. Clarence Jackson was thrown under the horses and was run over by the carriage, but escaped with some severe bruises and mutilated clothing. The runaways finally brought the vehicle up against a tree, which so retarded them as to enable some gentlemen present to stop them. None of the occupants of the carriage were injured and no serious damage to the outfit was done.

Oil City, July 31—That portion of Oil City west of Oil Creek is all on fire this morning.

Washington, July 31—The President has officially proclaimed ratification on both parts of the treaty concerning citizenship of Prussians.

Paris, July 31—The imperial decree is suspended for three months from October first in relation to the collection of tonnage dues from all ships entering French ports with cereals.

Shanghai, July 4—News from Japan says a compromise will probably lead to a speedy termination of hostilities between the Mikado and Tycoon.

Suggestive Questions on the Sunday School Lesson by Rev. Dr. Linscott.

August 2nd, 1908.

David Anointed in Bethlehem. 1 Sam. xvi: 1-13.
 Golden Text—Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart. 1 Sam. xvi: 7.

Verse 1—What method did God use in talking to Samuel, and what method does he use today in talking to the faithful?

Verse 2—Did the Lord intend this instruction to Samuel, to say he was to come to anoint, and if so, in such a way as to be a means of revealing Saul, and if so, in such a way as to be a means of revealing David?

Verse 3—Is it perfectly safe to go where God may send us, with only partial knowledge of what we have to do, with the confidence that God will make clear our full mission in due time?

Verse 4—May we hope for prosperity if we do not fall in gladly with God's plans?

Verse 5—If we are afraid of God's representative, or of God's providence, is it a sign of guilt?

Is God's coming, in any guise, always "peaceably," and for our good, if we are true to God?

Do we all need special preparation in order to enjoy public worship to the utmost, or should we always be in a proper state of mind for worship? Verse 6—Should we permit ourselves to form a definite opinion of others without special light from God and in such light always available?

Does God permit really true and careful men to sometimes form wrong opinions, and if so why?

Verse 7—How much dependence can we place upon a handsome appearance, as an index to ability and goodness?

The men and women generally have their character stamped upon their faces?

What is the difference in God's judgment, and in man's judgment, of a man?

Verse 8-10—Is it usually necessary for us to find out by actual experience what we need to know, and why?

On what ground does God make his choice when he has positions to fill? (This question is to be answered in writing by members of the Church.)

Does it follow that when God passes a man by and selects another for a certain position that he loves the selected one more than the other?

Verse 11-13—Was it David's goodness alone that procured him the position of king?

When a man of God comes to face with a supreme opportunity is there any possibility of him not embracing it?

Lesson for Sunday, Aug. 3rd, 1908.—David and Goliath. 1 Sam. xvii: 38-49.

The bright spot in a dull day is Shredded Wheat with berries and cream. If you haven't tried it, you don't know all the joys of summer. A pleasant surprise for the stomach after the heavy meats and soggy pastries of the winter. Give Nature a chance. Shredded Wheat with fruit is wholesome, strengthening and satisfying. At your grocers.

Always heat the Biscuit in oven to restore crispness. Two Shredded Wheat Biscuits with milk or cream will supply all the energy needed for a half day's work. Try Toasted TRISCUIT, the Shredded Wheat wafer, for luncheon, with butter, cheese or marmalade.

FATAL PANIC ON A TROLLEY.

Fuse Blows Out, Passengers Jump and Woman Is Killed.

New York, July 31—A woman was killed and nine other passengers were injured in a panic on a trolley car on the Brooklyn bridge Thursday night when a fuse blew out.

The car was running fast down an incline toward the New York terminal, and when the fuse blew out in the motor box it appeared as though the car was in flames. The 18 passengers were mostly Italians and they jumped to the roadway. In the excitement Mary Constantine was hurled violently to the ground as she leaped and her head struck a piece of iron. Her skull was fractured and she died almost instantly. Mrs. Grace Deacon of Newark, N. J., was badly hurt and may die.

Good housewives prefer Gold Medal Flour.

Tribute to Womanhood.

Womanhood is the most sacred thing in life. When God made worlds, and spun from His fingers like jewels on a string planets and systems of planets, and then had called the various forms of His living creatures into being, even after He had made man, the last and greatest creative act was the holiest for the man.—Exchange.

Barbarous English Custom.

Boys in the west of England believe that by squeezing a mole to death between the hands and touching the affected parts with the blood that oozes from the mouth of the dying animal warts will disappear and will not reappear. The culprits are convinced that moles, worms and other subterranean dwellers have no feelings, and therefore, it is not cruelty to put them to death in this way.

Westphalia Gold Medal Flour is best for pastry. BAKERS.

PARACHUTE JUMPER KILLED.

William Oliver Meets Tragic Death Near Jackson, Mich.

Jackson, Mich., July 31.—William Oliver, a young aeronaut of Mason, Mich., was killed Thursday while making a parachute drop at Hague park, on Vandercreek lake near here. Just as the parachute filled the strings on one side snapped and the aeronaut dropped 2,000 feet to his death, the parachute trailing, a useless rag, after him. Oliver landed near a crowded merry-go-round and lived five minutes after being carried to the nearest house.

"Useful Friends."

People are loved not for their goodness, their beauty, their wit or their wisdom, but for their utility. "Can he or she be of any use to me?" is the question which arises in the minds of many men and women when introduced, and if the answer is in the negative there is no continuance of the acquaintance.—Gentlewoman.
